Reader's Opinions

I really enjoyed this series of short stories, which weren't all "Gung Ho!", "Tally Ho!" or "Let's get Gerry!". There were some real human depth, given to the characters and some lovely setting of scene with memorable moments.

So, Bates was hired by the RAF during WW2 to, basically, interview their pilots/staff and write short stories based on their experiences to help the public understand better what it was like for them and this is a compilation of those stories. While technically, on a base level, it...
